Our story

We are based in the Dutch town Enkhuizen, an hour north of Amsterdam, where the wind always blows, and people work hard. The local attitude is in our DNA, too: make your best effort, have fun while doing it and always keep your word. Oh, and in the flatlands where we are, there is no escape from being down-to-earth. No-nonsense is our middle name.

Creating an immersive experience

We call ourselves passionate nerds. We are genuinely in love with movies, the perfect cinema seat and creating the most glorious home cinema for our clients. If you are up for it, we can discuss the perfect stitching of a cinema chair. For hours. We can also talk about watching Formula 1 on a big screen, the best audio systems and the ultimate seating arrangement in your cinema. We are motivated to give you an immersive experience, within the comfort of your own home, from our passion and experience.

Good to know...

How many seats fit your home theatre?

To determine the number of seats in a home theatre, it is important to know the setup. If you have a Dolby Atmos home cinema with a size of 5 x 6 meters, then 2 rows of 5 seats will perfectly fit. So in total there will be 10 seating positions. Of course, more is also possible, but that might be at the expense of the cinema experience.

The number of home cinema seats in a home cinema (pro tips & tricks)

As described above, with a space of 5x6 meters you can store a total of 10 seats. It depends on a number of variables whether you can actually place that. For example, take the position of the door into account. Also the height of the room determines how high a riser can become for the back row.

When determining the number of rows of home theatre seats it is important that you take into account:

- The distance between the speakers and the seats
- The position of the door
- The width of the screen
- The space between the rows
